

Lecture 26(Asynchronous)

In one lecture, we discussed the difference between open-source and closed-source software. Open-source tools allow access to the source code and community improvements, while closed-source tools are controlled by a company. We also talked about Apache Tomcat and how it is commonly used in enterprise environments for running Java web applications.